IRISH INDEPENDENCE.

Discussing the Remodeling of Parliament.

It is Proposed to Give Ireland Independence.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The Herald's London special says: The Herald's recent editorials on the necessity of the legislative independence for Ireland and the establishment of a grand imperial parliament, including representatives from Australia, Canada, the Cape, Ireland and Scotland, attract much attention in political circles, especially among the Irish members, of all shades of opinion, for on this point the majority of Irishmen are agreed. In these editorials the Herald expresses, as far as the cable informs, the ultimate aim of the Irish agitators, though hitherto they have been almost absolutely silent on the subject, at least in parliament. They have thought first of getting the land bill and afterward of raising the more serious question, saying, justly enough perhaps, that if the question comes up for discussion the land bill would have little chance of a careful consideration and this vexed question is better settled before than after the change. So far only one Irish member has spoken earnestly in public on the subject of legislative independence: Parnell, Dillon and other leaders have discussed the subject privately but had some idea of postponing earnest work on the question till 1883, the centennial anniversary of the old Irish parliament, yet they might wisely take good advice now offered by the Herald and begin work at once as it will take a long time to convince by ordinary process every Englishman of the necessity of legislative independence for Ireland. Since the publication of the 13th of the Herald's editorial comments here, indeed, the suggestion has been discussed by the home rulers, that the campaign for legislative independence should be opened immediately by having Justin McCarthy embody his views on the subject in a pamphlet for the broadest distribution.

The English parliament at present is simply an unwieldy body legislating on British local affairs, and wasting its own time and the time of the country by discussing trivial affairs for Ireland, Scotland and Wales, instead of being a body representing the empire, and dealing with grander questions belonging to it as a great European and imperial power. No better time than the present could be found to urge the idea of an imperial and national parliament. England's power to-day is paralyzed; her influence in Europe is nullified by Irish discontent, and she is quite incapable of asserting her dearest interests so long as Ireland remains hostile. Examples enough can be quoted of wrong headedness in other countries. Austria's weakness in the Sado-Prussian campaign was in Hungary's disaffection; and Francis Joseph appreciated too late the truth of Franz Deak's assertion. "Forced unity will never make an empire strong. The empire would be weakest at the moment when it would be in want of its united strength and the full enthusiasm of its people. If, therefore, your majesty wishes your empire to be really strong, your majesty cannot attain that object by a compulsory unity, but by a mutual understanding, arrived at through full consent of the nation."

The home rulers with whom I have so far spoken thoroughly agree with the opinions expressed by the Herald. Justin McCarthy highly approves of the Herald's scheme of confederation and would be prepared to support it. Many Irishmen would prefer it to absolute independence, because while it could guarantee home rule to the fullest extent it could afford wide scope to the intellectual classes by permitting them to take part in the good government of the vast empire. Mr. McCarthy thinks with the Herald that the scheme would soon strengthen and consolidate the empire which in the face of war with any strong maritime power would undergo a great strain. He considers that public opinion in England is becoming more and more favorable to some solution looking to the release of parliament from the work of local legislation. T. P. O'Kelley, M. P., expressed himself in similar strain. He thinks the scheme proposed by the Herald would probably content Ireland and solve the Irish question; even the extreme nationalists, he thinks, would accept it as a trial, because under such a system Ireland would enjoy home rule and practical independence. Were England wise she would listen to adopt the Herald's scheme, which thinks alone can keep the empire together. The views of Mr. Justin McCarthy, which have been summarized, I gathered from the well-known historian last night. To-night McCarthy favors me with a short letter on the subject, elaborating his opinions more carefully. He says: "I have long been advocating some system like that which the Herald recommends. I would have a truly imperial parliament to discuss, not parochial or local or even national affairs, but business that is common to all nationalities and states bound in confederation. According to my idea, England, Scotland, Wales and the various colonies should all be represented there, each at the same time having its separate parliament to manage its own business. Such an idea is growing every day. In the colonies it is much favored and consequently discussed at the royal colonial institute here, an organization founded for the express purpose of representing colonial opinions. The colonies see with undeniable force that at present they are exposed to all the dangers which a war between England and any foreign power may bring, without having any part whatever in England's foreign policy. I do not lay much stress on the proportion of representation to population, although that will doubtless come in the end; but for the present, it would matter little in the bad condition of the country if city representation prevails. The great object is to establish the principle of a federation with national or local parliaments for local or national affairs and an imperial parliament for the business for the empire. Such I believe to be the ultimate solution of the problem of the government."

SENATORIAL COURTESY.

Why Grant has not Answered Garfield's Letter.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The Times has interviewed Gen. Grant, who said he received Garfield's letter while in Mexico, in which he expressed such views respecting the position of Conkling and "me too" towards the administration as he now maintains. He had not yet had time to answer the letter, but would do so at length, as was most polite and friendly. In fact he had already begun an answer to it. He didn't feel it was proper to give the letter for publication, but the president had his full consent to give both letters out. The letters would explain themselves. It was time to answer the public charge that he was inconsistent on the senatorial courtesy question. He had consulted Sumner and Boutwell in appointing Simmons collector of Boston, but Sumner put himself outside the pale of respect from the administration by his treatment of it. Boutwell strongly supported Simmons, who was really a fine, competent officer. When Dawes and Hoar became senators they demanded Simmons' removal, and he was removed despite the protests of business men of Boston because of senatorial courtesy.

INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION.

Mexico Aroused to the Necessity of a State Fair.

CHICAGO, June 21.—Information has been received that a scientific and artistic, agricultural and industrial exposition will be held at Orizaba, Mexico, in November next under the auspices of the government of the state of Vera Cruz. Ample arrangements are being made by the state authorities for the accommodation of visitors. All goods intended for the exposition are free of duty. Reduced rates on freight from the United States to Vera Cruz have been received and shippers will be relieved from all care, annoyance and trouble of shipping, clearing or entering their goods. Messrs. Davis and Whiting, of this city, have been commissioned by the governor of the state of Vera Cruz to invite citizens of the United States to participate in this exposition either as visitors or exhibitors, and to assure them that no pains or expense will be spared to secure their pleasure and profit. He will give any information desired if sought or addressed.

MOON'S MURDERER.

Clay Wilson has his Preliminary Examination.

DENVER, June 21.—The examination of Clay Wilson for the murder of Jim Moon is going on to-day. Ten witnesses were examined this morning. In the argument this afternoon Shafroth for the people made the point that Moon made no demonstration against Wilson at the time of the shooting while General Browne for the defense argued that the act was not only in self-defense but a commendable one endorsed by the people and the press. A decision will probably be reached this afternoon.

BOUND OVER.

Clay Wilson was bound over in the sum of five thousand dollars to appear before the grand jury.

ON A STRIKE.

The brickmakers' strike didn't hold nor assume any large proportions as was yesterday expected. The employes of the three yards were on a strike yesterday and these boasted that to-day all the others would join, but on the contrary the strikers to-day agreed to resume work at the old rates.

Moss-Backed Barnacles.

LONDON, June 21.—The Sportsman says some of the Henley stewards stayed away from the meeting, so as not to go on record on the matter of admitting the Cornell crew, and they severely condemn the cowardly method of opposing their entrance. The matter is contemptible, and a disgrace of which England should be ashamed.

Wreck on the Rail.

IOWA CITY, Ia., June 21.—The train on the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern struck a cow just at the entrance of the bridge near here and broke the bridge. The engine went down in the stream killing Engineer Nolan and Brakeman Maloney.

St. Leger Stakes.

LONDON, June 21.—Iroquois continues the favorite for the St. Leger stakes. The betting is 5 to 2 against him. He and Peregrin are backed even against the field.

CONKLING COMA.

A Pause Which Does Not Count One for Roscoe.

Investigating the Bribery Case to Little Effect.

BRIBERY INVESTIGATION.

ALBANY, June 21.—In the assembly bribery hearing this morning, Rosendale, associate counsel for Bangs, said that Bangs was necessarily absent at the supreme court in New York, and he requested a postponement of the hearing until Wednesday. John J. Davenport said he could not be here to-morrow, but would be on Thursday. He desired to read the evidence of Strahan, and asked the committee to direct the stenographer to furnish a copy of it to him. This was done. Counsellor Smith said Tillinghast is here this morning to give his evidence. Unjust criticism has been indulged in before this committee relative to his absence on Friday last. He didn't desire to avoid appearing before this committee, and now desired to be examined. He hoped he would be examined to-day. Peckham, the witness from Olean, has been here since Friday, awaiting examination. He wanted to go home, and he hoped the committee would permit him to give his evidence this morning. The committee decided to hear him. Ewald of Olean was sworn and said: "I had a conversation with Assemblyman Bradley at Olean, June 4. I said he was a pretty fellow to vote for Conkling and Platt when all his constituents were opposed to their return." Bradley answered him: "Keep your shirt on for a few days and you will hear of something from Albany which will astonish you."

Question by Skinner—Did you keep it on?

Answer—Yes; but I would like to make a change now.

The witness was cross-examined by Rosendale. Question—"Which wing of the republican party do you belong to?"

"To neither, thank God."

By Scott—"Where did this conversation occur?"

Answer—"On the street at Olean."

"Did he intimate what would cause the astonishment?"

"He didn't."

Draper moved to adjourn.

Skinner moved to amend that the Tillinghast examination take place this morning.

Brooks said he hoped the committee would proceed at once to the work assigned them by the assembly. There was no necessity for this continual delay in the work they had to perform.

Skinner's amendment was lost and the convention adjourned until Wednesday.

The bribery investigation stenographer was directed to give a copy of Strahan's evidence to John I. Davenport.

E. A. Walley, of Olean, testified that on June 4th he told Bradley he was a pretty fellow to vote for Conkling.

Leadville Concert Hall Destroyed.

LEADVILLE, June 21. A fire broke out in Jeff Witney's concert hall, on Chestnut street, about half-past eleven o'clock to-night, and before the flames could be gotten under control had destroyed the building and an adjoining lodging house, and badly damaged William Randolph's barber shop. The loss is about $10,000. The origin of the fire is unknown. J. L. Wright, C. B. Fish and Reuben Rozenarski, of the Humphreys close company, were injured during the progress of the conflagration, but none of them fatally.

Temperance Convention.

SARATOGA, June 21.—At the national temperance convention to-day the Rev. J. C. Griffin gave some of the results of forty years experience in Oregon. He said in 1843 the first settlers enacted a prohibition law but the legislature by a trick passed a license law which brought ruin to many. The president then announced the committees. Among the members of the finance committee are Jas. Weed, of California, Jno. B. Gough, president. Mr. Gough spoke eloquently after the meeting.

Washington News.

WASHINGTON, June 21. There is good authority for the statement that Assistant Secretary Upton will not be requested to resign. It is very probable that Upton will be commissioned to perform important duties in connection with the continuance of the 5 per cent. bonds.

A suit was filed to-day vs. Brady by John A. Welsh for recover $28,000. Welsh was formerly a banker here and advanced Brady $33,000, of which $28,000 remains due Welsh. His counsel says the suit is not connected with Star route prosecutions. Welsh once held a Star route contract in security and it is stated Brady's refusal to pay was founded on the theory that Welsh's share in the contract was payment of part of the loan.

Sithiger French, a painter, drawn on the grand jury, being a former beneficiary of Brady, has been excused because his name was incorrectly spelled on the jury list.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Upton leaves to night for Europe on refunding business. His friends deny this is a plan to supersede him.

Striking Workmen.

MARSEILLES, June 21.—A delegation of five French workmen went to the Julien factory to-day and summoned the proprietors to dismiss their Italian employees, threatening in the event of a refusal that 600 workmen would visit the works to-morrow and prevent the Italians from gaining admission. The deputation states that their action was resolved upon by a syndicate. The affair increased the excitement. Precautions have been taken to prevent their threat from being carried out.

If there is a further row the prefect of police will declare martial law; the riot was confined to individuals who committed barbarous murders in some cases.

GRISCOM'S FAST.

After Twenty-six Days He is Bright and Hopeful.

CHICAGO, June 21.—Griscom's fast continues to attract many curious ones, and is closely watched by scientific men and physicians. His flesh is almost boyish in its fresh color, but he begins to show a dry, parched skin. His eyes are bright and sparkling in conversation, but sunken and dull in repose. His wrists and hands are wrinkling unmistakably, and he is suffering, although he tries to conceal the fact. He began his twenty-fourth day at noon, having gained three-quarters of a pound in twenty-four hours. His weight was 168¾ pounds at 5 p. m., his pulse was 63, respiration 18, temperature 97½.

Griscom's weight at the beginning of his twenty-fifth day was 167¼ pounds; less 50¾ pounds since the beginning of the fast. In twenty-four hours he drank forty-eight ounces of water. He feels well, though weak; is vivacious in conversation and in good temper.

Arkansas Vigilantes.

ST. LOUIS, June 21.—The Republican's Little Rock special says particulars of a terrible affair were brought to town to-day. Some days ago the house of a miserly old farmer named Stokes, living in Sharpe county, was robbed of four or five hundred dollars, by six masked men. Thursday night last a band of fifteen or twenty men went to the houses of Tibbets, Abner Stanley, and James and Jonathan Callahan, took them to an adjacent glen, and tortured them in a most horrible manner, with a view of making them confess the murder. The Callahans have since been arrested, but it is said that Tibbets and Stanley were tortured to death, as they cannot be found.

Masonic Festival.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 21. The Masons will celebrate Thursday and Friday of this week. They offer $2,500 in prizes for military companies; five hundred dollars for artillery; five hundred dollars for the Knight Templars competitive drill; two hundred and fifty dollars for base ball matches, and one hundred dollars for a bicycle race. Five military companies are entered, three artillery and probably three Knight Templars.

Seven Children at One Birth.

NASHVILLE, June 21.—An authoritative account is received of the birth in Jackson county, of this state, of seven children at one birth. They were delivered at a distance of ten minutes to five hours apart. All were girls weighing 4 to 5 pounds each; all are healthy and well developed. The physician was greatly excited, and the people for miles around flock to see the woman and her babies. The husband is small and thin, the wife strong and healthy.

Good Railroad Showing.

CHICAGO, June 21.—The report of the directors of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific to its stockholders for the past year shows in addition to the figures already sent that the total mileage of the road is 1978. It carried 480,187 passengers last year, an increase of 6½ per cent. It also carried 409,495 more tons of freight, an increase of 14 per cent. more than the year before.

AN OPEN LETTER.

Discussing Dr. Howard Crosby's Lecture.

What the Members of the W. C. T. U. Think of the Doctor's Views.

Rev. Dr. A. G. Gordon, pastor of the Clarendon street church, as chairman of the Boston Monday lecture committee, wrote the following letter to the Boston Traveller:

"As considerable comment has been passed on the recent Monday lecture of Dr. Howard Crosby, it may not be improper that, as chairman of the committee having charge of these lectures, I should make the following statement:

"These lectures were designed to be religio-scientific. Eminent men among college presidents and theological professors were invited to participate in them. A chancellor of the University of New York, Dr. Crosby, was engaged as one of the speakers. So far as I am aware of, it was expected when he was asked to lecture that he would appear in some subject of scientific or theological nature, in which his education would enable him to shine so conspicuously. That he chose to come before us in the character of a belated reformer, advocating views that belong to the dark ages of the temperance reform, was his own responsibility. It is certainly to be regretted that so eminent a preacher and teacher should be found giving utterance to opinions that were calm, only in their cold and dogmatic contempt of sentiments which the great mass of temperance workers hold to be absolutely vital to any real success in battling against intemperance; and which sentiments are healthful only through the violent revolt which they must awaken in the minds of hundreds who will read them. Such sentiment will be sure of enthusiastic applause from every bar and liquor saloon in the city. They who sell intoxicating drinks from high to low disapprove of drunkenness as strongly as the eminent divine, holding equally with him that moderation should be the rule. I am grateful to be able to say to the credit of the Christian and temperance sentiment of our city, that the views advocated evidently met with almost or no sympathy from the audience to which they were addressed, so that while the lecturer was pursuing his announced purpose of carrying the "war into Africa," he stood among his hearers as a solitary sentinel pacing around the deserted citadel of his own opinions.

ORNAMENTAL TREES.

Fragrant and Beautiful for Lawns and Gardens.

Dr. E. C. Kimball showed us yesterday a very handsome catalpa tree in full bloom in the extensive grounds surrounding his residence on North Nevada avenue. This is the only tree of this variety in the city and is the sole survivor of a thousand which were presented to the city by General Palmer, and planted in Acacia park. Dr. Kimball informed us that he obtained the specimen, which now adorns his grounds, while the men were engaged in planting the trees presented by General Palmer, in the park. This was a poor tree with a short curved root, and had been thrown away as too poor a specimen to plant. Dr. Kimball picked it up thinking it might make a good walking stick. The next day he was laying out plants in his grounds and stuck the catalpa stick into the ground as a peg to hold the rope. The stock not being firm enough the doctor dug a hole and put it in root down, tamping the earth around it. When he had finished his work he allowed the catalpa to remain. It grew finely during the summer and was frozen down during the winter; this was repeated for several years. About three years ago the doctor cut back all the sprouts but one, and when winter came he banked the earth around the sprout. This plan worked like a charm and now the tree is about ten feet high and is loaded down with most beautiful and fragrant blossoms. The moral to all this is that the catalpa tree can be made to bloom and flourish here.

CLINGING TO THE CROSS.

Alleged Discovery of a Mine on the Holy Cross Mountain.

The Leadville Chronicle alleges that another has been discovered on the Mount of the Holy Cross. The story is as follows: "Joe Dixon, the well known prospector, bohemian and newspaper correspondent, has just returned from a long journey to the Holy Cross. His trip was replete with thrilling incidents, but none more fraught with interest than his experience in locating a claim, literally in the Holy Cross itself. The mountain derives its name, as everybody knows, from two gulches or fissures crossing at right angles on its bleak and inaccessible face. Dixon had conceived the idea that there was an immense mineral deposit at the summit of the mountain, and formed the project of pressing to the cross itself and there locating a claim. The undertaking seemed at first full of insurmountable difficulties. The cross loomed at least a mile and a half beyond the furthest point to which any prospector had ventured, and lay directly above an almost perpendicular precipice. Nevertheless, he started on his perilous journey alone, and carrying simply his pick-axe and a few simple tools and provisions. From the very first he found the way almost impassable. Huge canons split the country in every direction. These he crossed by lowering himself down one side with ropes, and then often by aid of notches cut in the earth, ascend the other. His progress was never faster than a slow walk, and oftentimes simply a crawl. After infinite perils, he finally reached the bottom of a long, precipitous incline leading to the wished-for spot. The cross had, upon near approach, lost all semblance to its appearance at a distance, and seemed only two long ragged gulches filled with snow. Toward the foot of the lowest of these was the point toward which Dixon pressed. For a time he managed to progress by crawling on his hands and knees, and then the cliff became so excessively steep that he was obliged to make a long detour in order to surmount it. Finally, creeping like a fly along a slender crevice that barely offered a foothold on the face of the precipice, he reached the foot of the cross, and to his joy observed the outcroppings of what appeared to be a fine vein of decomposed quartz carrying free gold. An instant's inspection satisfied him that it was a true fissure, and clinging to a tiny projection of rock with one hand, he drove his pick-axe into the yielding formation with the other. Securing a fragment, he allowed his pick-axe to fall and heard it crash far below upon the rocks. He dared not even glance into the abyss that yawned beneath him, but with averted head crept back. A pound yielded over 60 ounces from the specimen secured, and the probabilities are that he will make a good thing out of it."

HE THOUGHT IT WAS A BEAR.

How a Tenderfoot Came in Range of a Forty-five.

The Leadville Chronicle is responsible for the following story which is good enough to be true: "Nig" is a large, shaggy, black dog that appears to be the public property of a lot of the boys who toil with the pick and shovel upon the pine-fringed slopes of Mount Bross in Buckskin gulch. "Nig" is a beautiful dog, but as the miners put it, "Lord, what that dog don't know about most things ain't worth a cuss," would lead to the impression that he was clever. After the day's work is over and the men are returning to their cabins, "Nig" comes down the trail upon them with a swift though friendly rush.

"The other day, a tender foot expert from Pennsylvania, with a geological hammer in his hand, and a twenty-two calibre pistol in his belt, coolly sauntered up into the neighborhood of Nig's domain. With a friendly growl and the usual rush, Nig was on his way down the path. The expert wheeled suddenly, and pulling his toy pistol, fired, while Nig stopped short with a howl of pain.

"The dog's cry of anguish (for he was shot in the ear) brought one of the boys to the spot. The huge grizzled miner took in the situation at a glance, and quietly raising a forty-five calibre until it gleamed dangerously along the line of sight toward the form of the hapless expert with a roar that resembled the explosion of an Orsini bomb, yelled, 'What did you do that for, you ?'

"Pale as the snow beds above him, and trembling like the mountain aspens in the gulch below, the pilgrim fell upon his knees, and in horrified accents blurted out, 'O God! I thought it was a bear!'"

HELEN POTTER'S PLEIADES.

First Appearance this Evening at the Opera House.

Helen Potter's Pleiades will appear in the Opera House this evening. The entertainments given by this company are a delightful mingling of music and dramatic representations. Miss Potter is alleged to be the best reader on the American stage to-day, and she is supported by a company of excellent artists. The Rochester Democrat speaks of this company as follows:

Miss Potter is certainly one of the best elocutionists on the platform to-day, probably the very best outside of the drama, and in addition to her regular readings, a novelty is given to her act by impersonations of several famous speakers and actors, which are admirably done. Her lines are given with rare intelligence and power, and a nicety of intonation gives a sense of full enjoyment to the most acute ear. Her costumed imitations of Gough, Charlotte Cushman, and others, our readers are familiar with, but last evening she introduced another, by far the most difficult of any she has yet attempted, that of Mlle. Bernhardt. Miss Potter has very little assistance from nature in personating the girl, but despite everything, the picture was remarkably true, and the voice and manner a triumph of artistic art. The most popular character that she assumes is probably that of Gough, and in this she seldom fails to catch the house. Miss Potter has entirely changed her company since she was here last season, substituting the Fletcher quartette (instrumental) for the Swedish lady, vocal quartette, and adding Miss Earnest, soprano, and Mr. Macy, bufo. The four young ladies are evidently thorough and well drilled musicians, and their instruments harmonize finely. They make a novel and pretty appearance upon the stage, and their success in an undertaking so pretentious and difficult, is entitled to sincere commendation. Miss Earnest has a light, pleasant soprano, which she uses with excellent taste, and Mr. Macy sings well. Throughout the entertainment is pleasant and varied, and will meet with a generous recognition Monday night, when the engagement terminates.

City Marshal Beall informs us that some one is again distributing poison to the dogs, and the officers have upon several occasions been compelled to kill dogs suffering from the effects of it.

The Pirates of Penzance are again trying to make arrangements to appear in this city some time during next week. We hope they will succeed in their effort this time.

There will be some interesting running races at the Pike's Peak Driving park during the latter part of the week. The exact date has not yet been named.

The Denver and Rio Grande Base Ball club was out for practice on their Weber street grounds last evening. They are getting in shape for the approaching contest.

The Opera House company have concluded to reduce the price of admission to the balcony circle from $1 to 75 cents. The admission price to the parquette and parquette circle will remain at $1 and $1.50.

The Helen Potter Pleiades entertainment will open at the Opera House this evening. Miss Potter has the reputation of being one of the best elocutionists on the platform. Her continued imitations of Cough, Charlotte Cushman and Mlle. Bernhardt are hard to equal. The music rendered by the Eichberg quartette is pronounced excellent.

The Denver & Rio Grande base ball club are putting forth their utmost efforts to have the match game of ball between the Union Pacific club and their nine played in this city instead of at Denver, on July Fourth. Many of our citizens are desirous of seeing the match between these two rival organizations, and it is to be hoped that the game will be played here.

Mrs. C. W. Romney, editor of the Durango Record, was the first white woman, and, so far as known, the first woman of any color, to scale La Plata mountains to their top. In the preparation of the data on "The Mineral Resources of La Plata Mountains," just published in the Record, she visited all of the leading mines of that region, on horseback, and climbed 2,500 feet above timber line, the top of Lewis mountain.

Postmaster Price has had instructions from the postoffice department to pay special attention to the collection of postage on overweight letters. Each office in the United States has had similar instructions, and the revenue derived from this source will help to make the department self-sustaining. It is estimated that $[illegible] will be daily saved by this move.

The Western Union telegraph office in this city was illuminated by a consumptive and cadaverous kerosene light that looked as though it had come west for its health. The fixtures for gas are all in place, but the poverty-stricken Western Union can't afford a decent light.

The Railroad at Kokomo.

The Summit County Times, of the 18th inst., has the following: "The pioneer camp is to have the railroad at once. For the past three days tie and track layers have been busy on the road from Robinson to Kokomo, and as they are only one-quarter of a mile out from town, the road will reach here to-morrow. Switches will then be constructed immediately, and as soon as a time table can be prepared, regular passenger and freight trains will run direct from Leadville here. The track is being laid by the Rio Grande company proper, and Mr. Taylor, the manager, informs us that the road will stop permanently at Kokomo for some time. This will prove of decided advantage to Kokomo, and will furnish us the facilities we have so long needed. It is good news, and our readers can fully depend upon it."
